

The beginning of simple narrative is knowing what events are happening around you. To help your child build basic ideas of daily events follow the simple outline below.

At home during a quiet time sit with your child and help him/her develop the concept of narrating simple daily events. For example

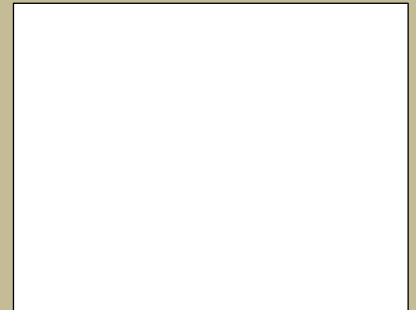

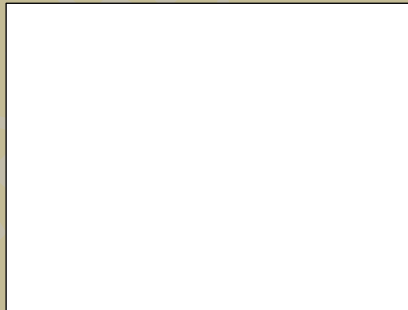

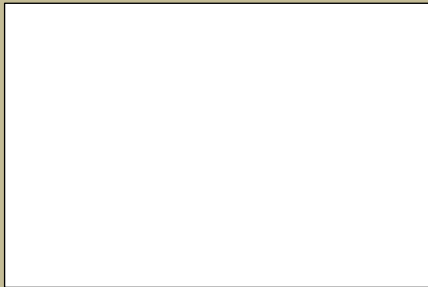

I wokeup,

and I ate breakfast

and I went to school

Use the above sample box to tell simple daily events. You can also draw your own box with simple stick figure of the events you would like your child to share for example, "I went to school, then we did circle time, and then we read a book."

Help your child expand by asking leading questions.
